ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I would like to thank everyone who participated in the preparation of this working document. Without their cooperation, this summary would not have come to existence:

- Representatives of international artists, organizations, colleagues in Europe IAA, IAA / AIAP, IFCCD, ECCD and ECA who supported the initiative and contributed to the spread among artists organizations.
- Artists from many countries, who responded to our proposal and submitted not only completed questionnaire, but often additional comments.
- Colleagues of the board of directors of the Slovak Coalition for Cultural Diversity (SCCD). Without their long-standing effort and real, open and constructive cooperation it would have not been possible to make status of the artist a reality in Slovakia.
- A wider range of colleagues in the Slovak Coalition Council, in the Slovak Union of Visual Arts, our predecessors, who have raised this issue in Slovakia back in the 90s, or those who participated in translating documents or supported our initiative in any other way.
- The Minister of Culture of the Slovak Republic and members of his team at the Ministry, who want to see this problem resolved and have encouraged us to collect factual information, to formulate constructive proposals, and to launch this international debate.

Dear colleagues,

This is an example of effective international cooperation: a proposed legal definition of a professional artist and a questionnaire on the status of an artist were sent to 5 international cultural organizations - IAA Europe, IAA/AIAP, IFCCD, IFACCA and ECA. I got answers from all of them.

Ericarts: Germany (Prof. Andreas Wiesand)

International Association of Art Europe (IAA Europe): France (Anne Pourny), Norway (Grete Marstein).

IAA/AIAP: Chile, South Africa (Anton Loubser), Mexico (Rosa Maria)

International Federation of Coalitions for Cultural Diversity (IFCCD): Australia (Ray Argall), Morocco (El Hassane Neffali), Canada (great help especially from Charles Vallerand - lots of information - not only positive but very complex), Austria (Yvonne Gimpel)

International Federation of Arts Council and Cultural Agencies (IFACCA): Australia (Sarah Gardner)

European Council of Artists (ECA): Malta (Narcy Kalemata), Denmark (Elisabeth Diedrichs), Finland (Ilkka Niemeläinen), Lithuania (Cornelius Platelis)

I summarized the opinions, information and examples of related laws from 21 countries from 4 continents (with great help from my colleagues from the Slovak Coalition for Cultural Diversity and the Slovak Union of Visual Art). We have found issues to often repeat themselves and to be very similar – now that we have answers from many countries, it is easier to compare. I believe that it can be useful to artists.

The 10th General Assembly of the International Association of Art Europe (IAA Europe) approved the following, in Oslo, Norway, this past October 5, 2013:

- Call upon Member-State governments draw from the best practices of specific laws on the status of an artist to improve the social, creative, employment and taxation conditions of artists taking into consideration their creative contribution to each nation's cultural development.
- Organize a conference on the status of the artist probably in Jerusalem in the fall of 2014 (we will discuss it with the organizer of GA IAA Europe 2014 – National Committee Israel).

We are very pleased with the positive response from countries, such as Morocco, where they are also working on the status of artist. We wish the best to our colleague Hassan El Neffali and all the others: it is very encouraging to know that they are actively engaged in a reform of the national legislation. We hope that this analysis will be somehow helpful and contribute to their efforts.

The process is not finished yet: we will be very happy to get reactions, comments, and especially missing information. We are continuously working on the analysis, voluntarily and in our free time. And therefore be so kind and excuse our minor errors or inaccuracies due to translation for example.

It is an open working document. We will appreciate if you could point out the mistakes or provide any other kind of comments on the issues.

Thanks once again to all who took part - or are going to take part - in the discussion.

The following summary/draft includes information provided by our partners in 21 countries worldwide. Please, bear in mind that it is a work in progress which focusses mainly - as a first step - on the following question: Who to include under the status of the artist?

The second step would be to analyze concrete measures to address the problems of artists in different countries. Our goal is to initiate an international discussion on this issue and come up with recommendations that would be acceptable to artists and governments.

INTRODUCTION

The improvement of the legal and social status of artists is one of the main goals of the Slovak Coalition for Cultural Diversity. It is also an important activity for many international artists associations with which we cooperate on a long term basis.

One of the ways of fulfilling this goal is a new legislation – a law on the status of an artist. Slovak artists have been discussing this issue for over two decades. Recently, we have seen that there was a real chance to move away from mere discussions and to enter the phase when things might actually be done: at a meeting between the SCCD and the Minister of Culture in May 2012, we reached an informal agreement to establish a working group to analyze the current situation and prepare a draft proposal. This group, consisting of SCCD members and ministry representatives - had several meetings until, at the end of 2012, an official working group was appointed by the Minister. It is now a part of the Slovak Governmental Council for Culture (advisory body).

With the aim to contribute to the achievement of a desired result:

- We continuously analyze artists' opinions and their situation in Slovakia and abroad. In the fall of 2012, I developed a basic analysis of the legislative framework of the status of the artist (see appendix 2) as well as a questionnaire (see appendix 3). I presented these documents during meetings with 5 international cultural organizations and disseminated them to our partners IAA, IAA Europe, ECA, IFCCD, and ECCD.
- Based on the collected data, we try to unite artists around common positions while searching for acceptable and feasible solutions for both the artist community and the government. The Slovak Coalition and its board play a key role in this process; activities are also facilitated by the Slovak Union of Visual Arts and other associations. The information is placed on our website and discussed at meetings and debates.

The SCCD board has prepared a draft version of The Status of the Artist provision as the starting point of discussions in the working group (see appendix 4).

Hereinafter, you will find a preliminary summary of the information I have received from several countries as well as the specific laws or texts related to their implementation in countries where status of the artist has already been incorporated in the social framework (Canada, Lithuania, Croatia, Morocco).

I have no doubts about the fact that international cooperation in this area can be beneficial to all parties involved. Despite differences in legal and social systems, the notion of the status of an artist and a common basic definition of concepts and criterias can save time and energy, but, most importantly, bring effective solutions – to the benefit of both artists and societies.

PRELIMINARY REVIEW OF FINDINGS

GENERALLY, WE CAN CONCLUDE THAT:

Governments worldwide have different approaches towards artists and culture: some states have complex legal provisions while others incorporate specific references/articles in other legislations.

Despite the fact that culture is a complex and varying system that encompasses many artforms (visual arts, music, theater, film, literature, etc.), and despite the fact that artists themselves can be very emotional about the issue, most responses were highly positive. A prevailing number of respondents understood the concept, expressed their support, and were genuinely interested in the results of our analysis. They also expressed their willingness to further cooperate in this effort.

A selection of relevant excerpts from the responses we have received is presented in the next section. By way of introduction, I will try to address uncertainties and doubts raised either in the information exchange or in the comments and clarify our intent, to avoid “getting lost” in addressing problems that this initiative has no ambition to solve.

Our objective is not to aggravate the situation or to discriminate “artists” (artists as defined by UNESCO, what we fully respect). Our proposal will not solve their situation and does not attempt to deal with it as it goes beyond the reach of our initiative.

Of course, that does not mean that solutions do not exist. We, in Slovakia, and I personally, actively support the many proposals aimed at solving the situation of an “ARTIST” in the broadest sense: support for non-professional artistic activity (with no purpose of financial income), the grant system, state funding of cultural and artistic activities, support for arts education, etc.

Thus, our attempt at defining a PROFESSIONAL ARTIST, and solve the specific problems that this raises, does not mean a rejection of OTHER proposals aiming to solve OTHER problems faced by artists, who receive no income from their artistic activities. Any complementary initiative is welcomed.

At the same time, we think that although we do not know how to solve ALL problems with one proposal, it is no reason to give up and abandon the one most likely to solve the problems of most ARTISTS: the aim is to find the way to solve the specific problems of artists whose artistic activity generates revenues and thus has an impact on their income tax and social security (hence to distinguish them from a wider group of “artists” we use the term “professional artist”).

OUR AIM IS:

- To launch an international exchange of views between experts either on the provisions of the status of the artist law where it exist (see Canada, Lithuania, Croatia, and Morocco), or through specific measures for artists in other laws.
- To try to come up with a universal and viable FRAMEWORK that defines the status of a professional artist, pulling from positive examples applied in practice, which could help improve the situation in countries where such a legal framework is missing and existing measures are not sufficient.

Even when there is a consensus around the need to give a status to professional artists –our aim is not and cannot be to IMPOSE our views on artists, associations, or even states.

In response to the concerns expressed by our colleague and friend from South Africa, Anton Loubser, I would say that, with regard to South Africa, and most African countries, traditional national values, crafts, etc. continue to play an important role in considering who is identified as a ‘professional artist’. As he says, we should be careful not to encourage the criticism sometimes heard in non-European circles that say that European countries (and the USA) tend to dictate to the rest of the world.

It is not and cannot be our goal to dictate anything to any country. None of us has such power. Any framework model can only stand as a recommendation or INSPIRATION for artists in search of concrete solutions through specific examples. Partial or fundamental recommendations are made to be discussed, and the decision making remains in the hands of the countries themselves.

As for WHO came up with a proposal is not important, whether from Europe or other parts of the world. The important thing is whether the proposal or the whole discussion can somehow help artists.

In response to the concerns expressed by our African colleague, the best is perhaps to give an African example, such as the protection of artists defined in the laws of Morocco (eg. Chapter III / Article 9 - see page 28 and Appendix 8, page 70), and another one from a non-European country, for instance Mexico, where it is possible for artists to pay their taxes in kind, with their works of art (see page 27).

One more comment on the baseless concerns expressed on behalf of non-European countries: yes, the legal and social status of artists varies from one country to the other. There are also differences within Europe. It would be unrealistic to expect this exchange of views or our proposal to fundamentally change the situation in countries where the social and legal status of artists is already at a good or very good level. Nevertheless, I believe it can have a positive effect. There is always room for improvement, and it is important to prevent setbacks, but this discussion may be most meaningful for countries where the legal and social status of artists is neither good nor satisfactory.

However, I agree with the opinion of Anton Loubser, when he writes:

«As for South Africa, perhaps as for the majority of African countries, the decision, who is a professional artist, is still majorly influenced by the traditional national values, crafts, etc. »

I agree, and this is why, together with colleagues, we have worked to provide a summary of the specific examples we had access to. However, international consensus can only be sought on a framework model. The setting of specific criteria is for each country to define, if only because of substantial differences in traditions, legal and social security systems and current priorities.

Since we were the ones to initiate this international debate on the definition of a professional artist and on the status of the artist in the context of the current informed discussion between artists and officials of the Ministry of Culture of the Slovak Republic (and we do as much as we can to reach a realistic outcome), I would like to present a framework model which emerged as a compromise after a lengthy discussion between artists in Slovakia.

This formulation came to exist independently from the legal provisions in other states. When we started comparing them, we found, despite differences, surprising - but logical - similarities that could form the basis of a framework model applicable elsewhere.

SLOVAK PROPOSAL OF CRITERIAS FOR THE STATUS OF A PROFESSIONAL ARTIST

1. Voluntariness: an artist should be considered professional, only if he or she so desires;
2. Income from artistic activities: although we initially tried to omit this criteria we concluded that it is necessary because it is one of the important characteristics of professional artists (since our objective is to address the specific problems of artists whose artistic activity affects their income tax or social security).
3. Simplicity, openness and transparency of the system: on the basis of clearly defined and transparent criterias, the framework must allow for the status of an artist to evolve from the broadly defined category of “artists” to the more closely defined category of a “professional artist”.
4. The chance for artists that play an active role in art and artistic creation to seek professional status recognition, if one of three alternative conditions is met:
  1. Education -he/she received professional training;
  2. Association -he/she is a member of the generally recognized organization active in the field;
  3. Personality -he/she is a recognized personality in an artistic field based on achievements.
5. Transfer responsibility of accreditation to the artists: according to the experience of several countries (see examples in paragraphs IV and V) the artists themselves, not the state, would decide who is to be given the status of a professional artist (by granting them membership to associations or assessing who is a personality).
6. Protection against the consequences of arbitrary/subjective decisions: no one should have a monopoly on the accreditation of professional artists. The artist should be given the option to choose from several alternatives the one that is most suitable for her/him.

There are logical reasons to explain why the proposed three criterias (education / association / personality) complement each other:

a. Professional education

Indeed we can agree with the objection that sometimes school cannot make someone an artist.

However, can it be argued that if someone has talent, then completion of professional education will weaken his talent? Probably not.

Is it not true that quality professional art schools require admission tests to appraise talent; that a student is evaluated many more times during his study; that graduating from college or another art school is the result of such tests – so he must prove, during the course of his study, over and over again, that he "has what it takes"? Undoubtedly yes.

Education is the foundation of development in any field of human activity. Is it not a good enough reason to support the learning, deepening, completing of education, and lifelong learning in the arts field as well? I am certain of this: gaining a professional, technical and technological experience and developing the skills, theoretical knowledge (aesthetics, art history, philosophy, etc.), even after having spent several years in the artistic milieu and having actively sought solutions in artistic expression can (although it does not happen with every student) open new and unexpected horizons.

It is true that in the arts field there are and always will be exceptions. I mean individuals who are certainly successful in the arts despite the lack of professional education. The proposed framework does not discriminate against them since the second and third conditions do not require professional education.

Therefore, I believe that education in the arts should be supported by all available means: in accordance with the practice in many countries (in some cases it is essential). At least one of the three conditions - as a compromise - should help define a professional artist.

The specific level of education required to meet that criteria could be defined by the county itself.

b. Association

The creation of high-quality artwork does not depend on associations of artists or cultural ministries: the work of art itself is determined primarily by the artist. However, the general conditions under which artists work, the laws, whether or not he can make a living from his art largely depends on the state, ministries of culture etc. Legal and social status of artists, cultural development strategy, public attitude towards culture and the art is never resolved and fixed in time: it is a process that is continually evolving – sometimes turning for the better or even for the worse. Therefore, it is in the interest of artists to have strong and actionable associations that are able to be reliable partners for the state in matters of social and legal status of artists and other key issues of culture and the arts, and that can represent and defend the interests of artists. Without the strong national associations, we would not have organizations such as IAA Europe, IAA/AIAP, ECA, ECCD, IFCCD and others, which have and should have the ambition to lobby in favor of constructive solutions in the arts and cultural fields in international forums (EC, EU, UN, etc).

Therefore, I believe that it is in the interests of artists to promote membership in associations.

Note: In your statements (see paragraphs IV and V) many of you supported such proposition. Today it is also a reality in many countries. A more precise definition of the conditions that give credibility to such associations could be determined by each country - for example the number of members required will be different in large countries (China or Germany) than in smaller ones (Monaco or Liechtenstein).

c. Personality

The last option - acceptance of indisputable personalities without examining whether and which education they have, and without forcing them to be members of an association - complements the other two options and gives enough space for substantive solutions in the spirit of fair play.

The decision (who is a personality in the field of art) would be left to artists themselves within a specific country.

Finally, I would like to reiterate that negotiations with the state, aimed at gradually improving the legal and social status of artists, to the extent possible in a given country, are never easy. However, they are easier when backed by reliable information, positive and constructive solutions, and wider international support. I therefore find important to deal with this issue.

SUMMARY OF RESPONSES (with selected and most interesting quotes)

1. AUSTRALIA

RAY ARGALL, PRESIDENT, AUSTRALIAN DIRECTORS GUILD AND PRESIDENT OF THE AUSTRALIAN COALITION FOR CULTURAL DIVERSITY

It's a bit like a can of worms trying to define Artist, and in Australia we are still waiting on our own National Cultural Policy to be processed through government.

As it stands now, as far as the tax office stands it's pretty straight forward to be considered an artist purely on the basis of ones economic activity (ie: proof of earning a living from creative work). However it's not so clear with social security which has a whole other range of considerations. We are hopeful the NCP will address this but from the POV of this question it's not the same answer for tax or social security.

Artists working in different creative industries often have different rules and definitions, and different mechanisms of govt support that carry their own definitions of eligibility.

The answer to the question(s) may differ for someone working in the screen arts as to musicians as to visual artists, etc.

SARAH GARDNER, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF ARTS COUNCILS AND CULTURAL AGENCIES

This is an important question and one of the first things ever addressed by IFACCA in our D'art research questions (in response to a question to the Australian National Association for the Visual Arts [NAVA]). Information about our report published in 2002, "Defining artists for tax and benefit purposes" is available here <http://www.ifacca.org/topic/defining-artists-for-tax-and-benefit/>. I hope this helps your discussions – even though it is now ten years old and a small sample.

It is also worth noting that the Compendium on Cultural Policies www.culturalpolicies.net (for Europe) and the international version we are developing, WorldCP www.worldcp.org (see <http://www.worldcp.org/profiles-structure.php> ) has a whole Section 5 on "Legal provisions in the cultural field" - so you can check on that for nearly 50 countries now. You may already be aware of this useful resource too <http://www.culturalpolicies.net/web/status-of-artists.php>

2. AUSTRIA

YVONNE GIMPEL, AUSTRIAN COMMISSION FOR UNESCO AND AUSTRIAN COALITION FOR CULTURAL DIVERSITY

This reply only illustrates the situation in legal and practical terms, but does not represent the political position or current state of discussions of the relevant artist associations/ interest groups!

Just to give you one example: the Austrian Association of visual artists as well as the Austrian Council of Culture have been discussing for some time now the very narrow and restrictive practice of defining artists as precondition for access to the Austrian “artist social insurance fund” which does not (anymore) reflect the developments and every-day life reality of professional artists and artistic activities (you’ll find a rough translation of the latest political statement on this matter in our previous correspondence with Mirka).

Q1. Yes. “Law of Social Security Insurance Funds for Artists” (Künstler-Sozialversicherungsfondsgesetz, KSVF-Gesetz)<sup>2</sup>. The KSVF- Gesetz specifies a “Professional Artist” (KünstlerIn) - (BGBl. I Nr.131/2000, last changes through BGBl. I Nr. 55/2008)

- Arts, music, literature, cinematics or in one of the contemporary implementations of art due to his/her artistic capability in line with artistic activities.
- A person who successfully completed an artistic higher education is artistically capable to exercise those artistic activities that are covered by the higher education.

In order to determine if a particular activity falls within the definition of artistic, the KSVF requests an expert opinion from the so-called Künstlerkommission (art commission). The sub-commissions (Kurien) provide expert opinions as to the existence of so-called “Künstlereigenschaften” (art qualities) and the artistic activity.<sup>3</sup>

If the report is negative, the applicant may appeal for a new assessment from the appeals commission. The sub-commissions are primarily composed of representatives of special interest groups, artist unions and collecting societies.<sup>4</sup>

Q2c. Yes (complete answer at Q6. below)

Q5. Austria not only follows the “alternative 5” of the attached proposal, recognizing a professional artist based on the combination of the two criteria “specific art education” and “verifiable results of their art activities”, but combines it with the evaluations of the artists’ work by sub-commissions specialized in the area of arts (= evaluation by colleagues).<sup>5</sup>

Q6. Artists registered for compulsory insurance and who fulfil all other requirements will receive a subsidy towards their pension contributions from the KSVF (and since 2008 also for their health and, where applicable, accident insurance contributions where the maximum subsidy for pension insurance contribution has not been fully exhausted). (Social Security Insurance for Artists – Basic Guide 2011)<sup>6</sup> Since January 1st, 2011 there is the possibility to temporarily step back from the self-employed artistic activity and therefore form the compulsory insurance. [...] This is the right and necessary option for the goal of claiming an existing right on unemployment benefits.<sup>7</sup>

Furthermore has the KSVF the right to approve of delays of payment and payments by instalment or to renounce back-payments partially or totally, if this is unreasonable for the artist because of the economic situation.<sup>8</sup>

In 2001, the Law on Social Security for Artists (Künstler-Sozialversicherungsgesetz) came into force (since 2011 it has been called the Artist's Social-Security Insurance Structure Act) and freelance artists are treated the same as other self-employed professionals, which means they must pay their statutory social security insurance if they earn more than 6 453 EUR per annum. In many cases, the new Law created a situation whereby artists end up making two different types of social insurance payments: statutory insurance for freelance work and any other social security insurance payments which result from other part-time employment contracts they may have. As many freelance artists are employed both part-time and do freelance work, the contribution to the social security system is relatively high compared to total income. There was a change here in 2009, and indeed one that applies for those cases in which additional to self-employment there is a further income: if this income exceeds the threshold of EUR 4 515 (2012) it will also be subject to the obligatory social insurance payments.

The Law set up a Social Security Insurance Fund for Artists (Künstlersozialversicherungs-Fonds) which grants artists a pension supplement of up to EUR 130 per month, if their annual income from artistic Since January 2008, however, freier Dienstnehmer have had unemployment insurance. In the field of the performing arts, there is a specific labour law, the Actors' Law (Schauspielergesetz, 1922, amended 2011) regulating the working hours, holiday rights and bonuses for actors, which are different from the employee regulations. Formerly, actors were assumed to be employees but full employment with all the costs and obligations for employers (e.g. festival-organisers) is now often circumvented.

3. CANADA

In Canada, the Status of an artist has been applied for years. The response is positive and very complex. It provides us with a lot of interesting information. IFCCD General Secretary and Executive Director of the Canadian Coalition for Cultural Diversity, Charles Vallerand, contacted the Secretariat for the socio-economic relationship of artists, Directory for political and inter-sectoral relationships and the Ministry of Culture and Communication of Québec.

Several quotes relate to the definition of a professional artist. See appendix 5 for complete text.

The Conseil des arts et des lettres du Québec (Arts and Litterary Council) defines professional artists as follows for the purpose of granting scholarships<sup>9</sup>:

- declare themselves to be professional artists;
- practise an art or art activities on their own account or offer their services for remuneration, as

creators or performers, especially in the fields under the responsibility of the Conseil des arts et des lettres du Québec (CALQ);

- have gained the recognition of their peers;
- disseminate or publicly interpret their works in places and/or contexts recognized by their peers.

We note that this definition of a professional artist is similar to the definition, which is stated in the Act respecting the professional status of artists of visual arts, arts and crafts and literature, and their contracts with promoters (users) (LRQ, c. S-32.01).

Act respecting the professional status and conditions of engagement of performing, recording and film artists (LRQ, c . S - 32.1 )

This Act applies to artists and to producers who retain their professional services in the following fields of artistic endeavour: the stage, including the theatre, the opera, music, dance and variety entertainment, multimedia, the making of films, the recording of discs and other modes of sound recording, dubbing, and the recording of commercial advertisements. Adopted in December 1987.

For the purposes of this Act, an artist is a natural person who practices an art on his own account and offers his services, for remuneration, as a creator/performer in a field of artistic endeavour referred to in this act.

This Act grants professional status of artists. Among other things, it also supports the establishment of minimal labor standards by introducing the system of collective bargaining between the recognized artistic organization and producer or association of producers or recognized producer organization.

An Act respecting the professional status of artists of visual arts, arts and crafts and literature, and their contracts with promoters (users) (LRQ, c. S-32.01)

This Act applies to artists who practice their art their own account in these three artistic activities: visual arts, arts and crafts, literature. It also relates to disseminators of such works.

The second Act, relating to the status of the artist was adopted in 1988 and confirms professional status of artists working in three major artistic activities.

According to this Act, a professional artist is a person who meets each of the following four conditions:

- declares himself to be a professional artist;
- produces works on his own behalf;
- his works are exhibited, produced, published, presented in public or marketed by a promoter in any way possible;
- has been recognized by his peers as a professional artist by way of an honourable mention, an award, a prize, a scholarship, an appointment to an adjudication committee or an invitation to participate in a salon/exhibition or by any other similar means or is a member of a recognized association of professional artists.

Enacted in 1993 and brought into force in 1995, the Status of the Artist Act (1995) officially recognises the contributions artists make to Canadian cultural, social, economic and political life and establishes a policy on the professional status of the artist. It also recognises rights of freedom of association and expression of artists and producers, as well as the right of artists' associations to be recognised in law and to promote the socio-economic well being of those whom they represent. Although Part I of the Act (1995) established the Canadian Council on the Status of the Artist, which was intended to provide advice to the Minister of Canadian Heritage, to date, this part of the Act has not been implemented. Part II of the Act (1995) established the Canadian Artists and Producers Professional Relations Tribunal, and put into place a framework for the conduct of professional relations between artists and producers within federal jurisdiction (government institutions and broadcasting undertakings under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission). The Tribunal reports to Parliament through the Minister of Labour.

The Status of the Artist Act was reviewed in 2002-2003 as stipulated in section 66. (Prairie Research Associates 2002) Although the Act (1995) was endorsed by those consulted, there was also a consensus that the legislation, by itself, is insufficient to bring about significant change in artists' socio-economic circumstances. The Act's restriction to federal producers, the fact that it addresses only labour relations, and the fact that it does not apply to producers sub-contracted by producers within federal jurisdiction are seen by artists' organisations in particular as its main shortcomings. There was general agreement that other kinds of measures are necessary if the socio-economic circumstances of self-employed artists are to improve.

Certain deductions to the Income Tax Act (1985) are in effect for visual artists and writers, and performing artists. Visual Artists and Writers: visual artists and writers who are self-employed are entitled to deduct reasonable expenses incurred in connection with earning income from their business, including workspace in home expenses and professional membership dues. Visual artists and writers who are employees can deduct, within certain limitations, their expenses paid (e.g. advertising and promotion, travel expenses) to earn employment income from "qualifying artistic activity" which includes:

- creating (but not reproducing) paintings, prints, etchings, drawings, sculptures or similar works of art;
- composing a dramatic, musical or literary work;
- performing a dramatic or musical work as an actor, dancer, singer or musician;
- or an artistic activity in respect of which the taxpayer is a member of a professional artists' association that is certified by the Minister of Communications, now the Minister of Canadian Heritage.

Performing artists who are self-employed can deduct reasonable business expenses, including the following: insurance premiums on musical instruments and equipment, the cost of repairs to instruments and equipment, legal and accounting fees, union dues and professional membership dues, an agent's commission, publicity expenses, transportation expenses related to an engagement, cost of music, acting or other lessons incurred for a particular role or part or for the purpose of general self-improvement in the individual's artistic field.

4. CHILE

We appreciate that our analysis may also include the views of Latin America.

There is no valid system of clear distinction of professional artist in Chile and they agree with our proposed criterias, although they have some objections (the answer on the question “Do you think that some part of the proposal should or could be defined better?” was yes).

They added a detailed information:

- In Chile, the artist is defined as a “professional artist” if he gained college/university education (gained degree in the field of art and so on). Those without the art college/university education are considered to be amateurs who practice their art only as a hobby.
- It is difficult, in reality, to unify ideas and change the orientation in this area, where there are various criterias. Even different geographical conditions are revealed in the territorial differences between areas that influence assessment or criteria.
- Moreover, if the artists are recognized as “professional artists”, who have achieved in their profession a degree of recognition in other countries, the state also provides the means for local artists through competitive projects mediated by the Ministry.

Please note that the Council of Danish Artists gathers authors and performers of all artistic disciplines. Our perspective is not only that of the visual artists.

Q1. No

Q3a. Yes

We think that the proposal is OK. We understand it as "a specific art education and/or verifiable results of their activities".

It is then a matter of definition to find out of which schools that can be classified as "a Specific art education".

It is also necessary to find out what we mean by "verifiable results". There is of course the criteria of artistic quality, but there might also be a financial criteria and a criteria of activity. There are different opinions on to what extent the last 2 should be considered.

Finally I would like to add that the only definition of an artist that we are aware of in Danish legislation is written in a law on taxation. Artists are defined as people who receive income from the arts, and under certain conditions they may spread their taxable income over more than one year (a form of income averaging). But the policy of the Council of Danish Artists is not to ask for special schemes and rules for the artists within labour, social and tax legislation. We rather try to advocate for a treatment of artists that is equal to other groups in the society, and when it is possible we prefer to collaborate with other sectors. But in order to achieve equal conditions, the specific working conditions of artists must of course be considered.

Practical definitions for tax and benefit systems

All tax and benefit systems impact on working artists. Some countries have specific schemes that attempt to account for the particular working patterns of artists, or that target specific arts policy outcomes. All tax and benefit systems therefore require some formalisation of what it means to be an artist or a 'working' or 'professional' artist. Examples where such determinations need to be made are:

- to allow the tax deduction of arts work expenses.
- to allow income averaging for artists.
- in deciding the tax treatment of trans-national/cross-border artists.
- for specific instruments such as Ireland's special income tax exemption for artists (Revenue Ireland, 2001) and Croatia's Freelance [Independent] Artists and Encouragement of Cultural and Artistic Creativity Law (Institute of Public Finance, 2001).

ANNE POURNY AND THE CNFAP BOARD'S IDEAS

Q1. No. Having paid the membership to the Maison des Artistes cannot be considered as necessary and sufficient to be a professional artist.

Q3a. No, because a criteria based on diploma is unfair and contrary to reality.

Q3b. Yes (by following the UNESCO definition of Professional Artist and adding recognition of artistic activity).

Q6. In France, the Maison des Artistes requests to be a "professional artist" to benefit from the governmental health coverage. But it doesn't insure any artistic quality nor professionalism. Moreover it is in opposition with the UNESCO definition and therefore cannot be considered as a good approach.

Q7. Why conclude that "specific art education" is one of the two final criteria when it is recognized as an "unfair" criteria in the earlier discussion of article 3?

Everyone knows that what is important in any artist's life is not the diploma but the everyday training, meaning a continuous effort through trials and errors, successes and failures.

We agree with the second criteria stating that "verifiable results of art activity".

We are pleased to see the large number of disadvantages listed by Pavol concerning the "income from artistic activities": it excludes the possibility of using this criteria.

We don't have the tools to evaluate the references given by the White Paper of the Maison des Artistes about the various European countries. But we can say that contrary to this White Paper, in France, it is not an "administrative declaration" which determines "artistic quality".

The latest definition recorded by UNESCO was elaborated back in 1980, during the 21st session, in Belgrade, and published under the title "Recommendation concerning the Status of the Artist". In article 1.1

"Artist is taken to mean any person who creates or give creative expression to, or recreates works of art, who considers his artistic creation to be an essential part of his life, who contributes in this way to the development of art and culture and who asks to be recognized as an artist whether or not he is bound by any relations of employment or association".

As a conclusion:

We consider that the combination of the criteria included in the UNESCO definition together with an evaluation of the "artistic activity" must be presented as the universal solution and let each NC free to adapt its own criteria according to their needs (for instance : representativeness vis- à-vis local authorities), culture (for instance: importance of tradition and handicrafts), habits of assistantship (this is the case of France and some European countries), urgency of other issues (such as freedom of expression in Turkey and Tunisia).

There is no general tax legislation for culture, but many special measures operate in the different domains.

Tax laws for culture pertain to five major sectors:

- artistic and literary creation;
- preservation of cultural heritage;
- promotion of culture;
- cinema, broadcasting and the music industry;
- and press and publishing.

A specific social insurance regime applies to authors and to "artists-authors" (writers, music composers, film and television authors, software authors, choreographers, photographers, visual artists, graphic artists, etc.), by which they can benefit from social coverage under the same conditions as salaried workers.

Artists and technicians working in the performing arts or audiovisual and entertainment industries (film, television, etc.) can have specific social security coverage designed for people without regular activity or steady employment, a regime commonly called the intermittence du spectacle.

9. GERMANY

PROF. DR. ANDREAS JOH. WIESAND, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, EUROPEAN INSTITUTE FOR COMPARATIVE, CULTURAL RESEARCH GGMBH (ERICARTS), EDITOR, COMPENDIUM OF CULTURAL POLICIES & TRENDS IN EUROPE

I have not much to add to what Sarah proposes (to explain - Prof. Wiesand responds to the statement of Sarah Gardner from Australia - see above).

In principle, I sympathize with the solution proposed by the Slovak Coalition, as long as the focus remains on artists' activities and membership in any organisation is not made compulsory in order to get recognition (since this would exclude a great number of people). Of course, answers to the question of a "legal definition" of artists will depend, in most countries, on what particular field or problem is to be addressed, e.g. taxation, health and pension benefits or eligibility to receive public funding.

Reviewing the results of comparisons made in the context of the Council of Europe/ERICarts "Compendium of Cultural Policies and Trends in Europe", we came to this conclusion:

"In addition to the systems of direct public support for the arts and artists, there are pieces of legislation in many European countries which take into account some of the social and /or economic needs of creative workers resulting from their often precarious working status. However, "integrated models" which facilitate cooperation between cultural policies (including direct and indirect measures) and other areas of policy making (e.g. economics, social affairs, health or employment) are few. A re-orientation or re-focussing of existing public policies for artists and their working environment in a more integrated manner remains a challenging task - artists and their associations or unions could try to contribute to solutions for this problem."

Possibly, the Compendium Experts Group on Legal Affairs and Cultural/Human Rights may find it challenging to participate in the search for appropriate solutions, which is why I will address them separately.

Artists and journalists / authors in the Federal Republic of Germany enjoy comprehensive social security coverage. When employed, they are covered under the general social security regimes. Self-employed artists and journalists / authors are obliged to join the Artists' Social Insurance Fund (KSK). The special protection for self-employed artists and journalists / authors provided for under the Artists' Social Insurance Act (KSVG) which came into force on August 2nd, 1981 encompasses statutory health, long-term or old age care and pension insurance. Like employees, the artists and journalists / authors must only pay half of the social insurance contribution. Sixty percent of what could be labelled an "employers share" is paid by the companies that regularly exploit and market the work of artists and journalists / authors. To that effect, the enterprises are charged with an artists' social insurance levy (Künstlersozialabgabe) on all fees and royalties paid, whose level is subject to annual adjustments. For example, the levy reached 5.8% in 2005 and then decreased in the following years to 4.1% in 2013.

In addition, the Federal Government provides a subsidy to help fund the supposed "employee's share" with 40% of the expenditures of the Artists' Social Insurance Fund. Through another amendment of the Artists' Social Security Law that came into effect in June 2007, the financial basis of the Fund was improved by broader coverage and a stricter examination of all contributors, including the artists as beneficiaries. In September 2008, the attempt of some Länder in the Bundesrat to abolish the Social Security Act for Artists failed, due to a broadly supported protest against such plans both from cultural policy makers of all parties and from culture and artists' associations.

With the exception of the Artists' Social Insurance Act there are no special laws regarding the terms of employment for artists and other cultural workers. The general labour legislation is applied. If artists or cultural workers are employed in municipal, Länder or federal facilities, then the public service regulations are applied. On the basis of the general Wage Agreement Law (TVG), special contracts and wage agreements for the cultural sector, including non-artistic staff, were concluded by unions and employers organisations for single artistic sectors and cultural facilities such as theatres, orchestras and music schools. The conditions of work for main occupational groups such as singers, actors, orchestra musicians etc., are laid down in these agreements. In addition, special courts of arbitration have been set up to settle employment disputes in theatres (Bühnenschiedsgericht).

Comment on the explanation of proposal (not the proposal itself):

Q1. In Malta we do not have any recognition of the artist.

Q2. Any creator of commerciable work whether artitic or not is given a VAT (value added tax number) and like all SME's or self employed has to give a numbered VAT receipt to his clients. Those who do not earn more than Euro 6,000 a year are tax exempt but cannot claim tax refunds on materials and work related costs.

Q3. I agree with the college 5 year graduation criterium although it is problematic as such courses only started in Malta in the last 20 years. Therefore many professional artists have no qualification.

Q4. Most of our artists have alternative jobs or teach their art for their regular income. Employment in the arts is mostly with government. With media industries based on IT (tv, PR, printing, etc.) the image is distorted as all of them could be deamed to be artists. For example a handful of architects who work on government financed projects in millions distort the average earnings of artists. For every highly paid architect there are 100 artists who do not earn enough from their art to live decently.

If I may suggest one consideration, I would like you to consider the establishment of criteria of the selection body behind the recognition of a professional artist. Probably, this will be a government entity like a medical board that accepts doctors and gives them an operating licence. So are we demanding that the selection board must be manned by persons who are really qualified to do the job?

TAXES AND SOCIAL SECURITY IN MEXICO

In Mexico artists have 2 ways of paying their taxes:

1. Pay with art work

Once a year artists can pay with their work in the following way:

- If they sell 1 to 5 works they would pay with a work similar in size and value.
- From 5 to 10 they would pay with 2
- From 10 to 15 they would pay with 3
- From 15 to 20 they would pay with 6

The work is judge by a jury, if the jury determines the work is not good the artist is asked to change it. If acceptance is denied for a second time the artist should pay taxes according to the sales he made. The Works collected by the Treasury Department are send to be exhibited in different museums of the country, embassies or in offices of the federal government. The Works becomes part of the National Patrimony.

2. Normal pay

The artists have to declare every month to the Treasury Department and have to give a receipt or invoice for each sold work and has to pay taxes according to the income they made. If no sales were made the artists have to declare 0.

SOCIAL SECURITY

In Mexico there is no social security for artists yet. An initiative was presented to the Senate and Congress. It was approved by the Senate and it is waiting for the approval of Congress.

EL HASSANE NEFFALI, THE MOROCCAN COALITION FOR CULTURAL DIVERSITY

Here are some interesting informations from Law No. 99.71 concerning the Status of Artists, 19 June 2003. Complete law in Appendix 8.

Chapter I Preliminary Measures Article 1. Definitions

1. "Artist" means any natural person who practices artistic activity, either continually or intermittently, in return for remuneration and in the context of a contract of work or employment, or who performs an artistic work to sell or rent it to others, or produces it for the public administration, local authorities or public institutions.
2. "Artistic activity" is any activity involving artistic creation or artistic performance, where:
  - (a) "Artistic creativity" is any artistic work by a natural person, particularly in the field of audio visual art, photography, fine arts, music, theatre, literature (either written or spoken) or choreography.
  - (b) "Artistic performance" is any activity involving the artistic presentation or execution of all or part of an artistic work by a natural person, in any way, especially in the fields of music, theatre, variety shows, circus or puppetry.

Chapter II Relationship between Impresarios and Artists / Article 6

The artist working under contract, whatever name is given to that contract, is an employee to whom the provisions of employment law apply, unless covered by a special text in that or other laws, and taking account of the provisions issued for protecting literary and artistic works or artistic activities carried out by artists who belong to public professional organisations.

Chapter III Remuneration Article 9

If the presentation or execution of the artistic activity requires more than fifteen (15) days, the artist and the impresario may establish payment dates by mutual agreement, on condition that the artist receives advance instalments every fifteen (15) days, in such a way that he or she has been fully remunerated at the termination of the contract or at the conclusion of the artistic activity.

Section Two Art Services Agencies' Fees Article 21

Staff of art services agencies, when undertaking their function of seeking employment for artists, may not receive or accept deposits or collateral of any kind.

The impresario alone bears responsibility for the fees requested by the art services agency, while the artists employed pay nothing.

Specific regulations are indicated in the Work and Income Provisions for Artists Act [WWIK, Wet Werk en inkomen kunstenaars, 2005]. This Act provides artists temporarily - for a maximum of 48 months, spread over a maximum period of 10 years - with a basic income (70% of the guaranteed minimum income). However, artists may earn up to 125% of the guaranteed minimum income by doing extra work, have no job seeking obligations and have free access to the training and individual counselling services of Artists&Cultural Entrepreneurship [Kunstenaars&CO, see also chapter 8.1]. The WWIK is intended for new artists, building up a profitable practice, and for established artists with a temporary decrease in income. Artists who want to make use of the WWIK, have to prove they received a higher arts education or have run a professional practice. Artists&Cultural Entrepreneurship has the legal obligation to execute these professional searches.

In addition to legislation, the government has many funds that provide support to the arts. For example, the Dutch Foundation for Literature [Fonds voor de Letteren] encourages the production of Dutch literature by offering scholarships to literary writers and translators, extra payments above their normal salary, start-up grants and travelling scholarships. The Netherlands Fund for the Performing Arts+ [Nederlands Fonds voor Podiumkunsten+, 2007

There are many collective bargaining agreements [collective arbeidsovereenkomst - CAO] in the performing arts and more generally in the cultural sector. CAOs are labour-agreements between employers and employees. This means that a CAO only applies to employees who are working with an employer. When this is not the case, the national legal agreements are enforced. The existing CAOs are used mostly in architecture, arts education, media (broadcasting, journalism, publishing houses), museums and exhibition halls, performing arts (dance, orchestras, theatre companies, and venues), public libraries, retail musical instruments and sheet music. Special trade unions exist to enforce or monitor these agreements. CAO-wages have risen in 2006, on average, by 1.8%.

NORWEGIAN VISUAL ARTISTS NBK, A SHORT PRESENTATION

Norske Billedkunstnere (NBK) is the national organization for visual artists in Norway. NBK's long-term commitment is to promote and secure the intellectual, social, legislative and economic interest of the professional visual artist. The government and parliament recognizes the organization as a negotiation and consultative body.

There are approximately 2,700 members in NBK (out of 4.5 million inhabitants). NBK is composed of 20 sub organizations: 14 regional organizations, 5 nation-wide skill-based associations and a society for the younger artists. Artists will normally be member of one regional organization and one or more skill-based organizations depending on their artistic expression. An executive Committee of 6 members and a chairperson, which are elected by the General Assembly every second year, govern NBK. The administration consists of 9 employees.

NBK is responsible for the annual state exhibition – Høstutstillingen – the major national contemporary art show held virtually every year since 1882. A national jury selects the artwork for the exhibition; Members elect the jury for a two-year period. NBK also allocates grants from the government grants for artists program as well as from funds controlled by NBK. NBK also publishes its own magazine, Billedkunst, with 7 or more issues a year that provides important information for members in the organization. In addition to the activities carried out by NBK centrally, the sub organizations carry out extensive exhibition programs in their own galleries as well as programs with travelling exhibitions on a regional or national level. The skill organizations publish their own specialized magazines; and the regional organizations run art centers with an extensive program aimed to promote art throughout their region. Some also manage their own pre college art education institutions.

NBK has made several notable achievements in recent years: It has promoted special tax legislation for the visual artist, increased grant budgets, promoted legislation for the public display of art, and implemented a new state institute for the promotion of Norwegian contemporary art abroad (OCA). Today, it takes action in behalf of its members: To preserve the grants and guaranteed income; improve the social security scheme; keep the artistic judgment within the artist's committees work for better studio conditions for the artists in the pressed urban areas and expanding the studio capacity; and to facilitate international exchange in the visual arts.

Entrance requirements for membership in The Norwegian Visual Artists Association (NBK)

The Norwegian Visual Artists Association (NBK) is an umbrella organization and consists of 20 member associations; - 14 regional associations and 6 nationwide associations (5 skill associations (painters, drawing, sculpture, printmaking, textile) and The Younger Artists Society).

Membership in NBK can only be obtained through the member associations. The regional associations have common entrance requirements, but the nationwide associations have each their own additional requirements.

The entrance requirements for the regional associations in NBK are a combined evaluation of the applicant's artistic formal and practical competence. The criteria for membership have as aim to secure that the members of the association are professional gainfully active visual artists. The applicant must have accomplished an education in visual art and/or in gainful activities proved a professional level comparable with the competence of a Master (MA).

The following criteria will be emphasized during evaluation:

- Education
- Artistic activities
- Commissions for Art in Public Spaces
- Purchase by public or private institutions
- Grants
- Awards

In the regional associations: applicants who have a master (MA) in Visual arts from the national art academies in Bergen (KHIB), Oslo (KHIO), Trondheim (NTNU) and Tromsø (HITØ), will automatically be accepted as members.*This is also valid for applicants from comparable institutions abroad (to be documented).

For applicants with a Bachelor (BA) in Visual arts from KHIB, KHIO, NTNU and HITØ * the education will be evaluated combined with the above criteria. Applicants without a formal higher education in Visual Art will be evaluated by the above criteria and compared with the requirements a MA.

In Serbia, so far the law has no definition of a professional artist but just artists, and we believe that it is not clear enough. Changing the Law is ongoing and we are trying to change this article in the Law. It was assumed that the definition applies to professional artists, because the law also covers the work of an amateur. There are still artists working in state cultural institutions. So, there is no concept of an employed and an independent artist. Both are considered professional artists (Law on the culture article 58).

All artists under copyright contracts are recognized standardized costs, depending on which artistic activity is exercised, in the amount of 34% to 50%. (Law on Personal Income Tax Article 56) This means that the tax and contributions for artists are lower than the allocations for other professions.

19. SLOVAKIA

PRELIMINARY SUMMARY OF THE SITUATION

On February 19th 2013, after the last correction, we basically reached consensus amongst SCCD members in connection with the prepared status of artist. On February 21st, we sent the final proposal to all the members of the SCCD Coalition Council. On February 28th 2013, the SCCD Coalition Council adopted the following resolution:

The Coalition Council authorizes its representatives, in the working group on the status of the artist in the Government Council for Culture of the Slovak republic, to open formal negotiations on the form of the legal norm.

Proposal and associated explanations and comments were sent to SCCD members and since February 2013 they are available on the SCCD website. Therefore enough space for factual and transparent discussion is provided with a view to obtain justified stimuli from the artistic community, as well as the widest possible support and identification of artists with the final form of the status of the artist and we hope to see it become reality in the foreseeable future.

After combining objections, the SCCD Board developed the latest version of the proposal - see Appendix 1, point c.

A different approach was taken with more technical details (specification of criteria and the name itself). The usefulness and the meaning of complex legal norm - the status of the artist – was not called into question.

Some of the issues discussed:

The name itself:

- status of a professional artist?
- or status of a registered artist?
- or status of a listed artist?

A minimal level of professional education:

- a university education - master's degree, master of fine art and comparable degrees?
- or a university education including bachelor's degree?
- or other alternatives and exceptions?

The required amount of income from artistic activities:

- set in % of total income?
- or set the minimal total amount required?
- or income from artistic activities at any sum?

Criteria for defining which associations or organizations should be accepted for the purposes of the status of artist:

- most of all statements were about the required minimal number of members

For now we left these and some other questions open: on the basis of discussions with representatives of The Ministry of Culture of the Slovak republic we will try to reach a mutually acceptable result.

I can conclude that the proposal will not come easily and certainly not frivolously. It is a really “hard-won” compromise.

The proposal is preceded by 20-years of general discussion among artists in Slovakia and then 6-year of real and tough discussion, mostly amongst members of the Board, but also with a wider range of colleagues, in addition to the negotiations with members of the Board within the working group at the Ministry of Culture since June 2012, so the proposal responds to some of the attitudes of the state. Each member of the Board, representing different fields of art, gave something in (from the perspective of the interests of specific areas of art no one is absolutely satisfied), but the resulting compromise can be a possible and acceptable basis for all.

We took into account the reactions coming in from all over the world.

Key positives:

- simplicity: practical application of first part – to whom the status relates – it does not require the creation of any new structures, if approved it could be functional almost immediately
- chance of involvement for those who are really part of art and artistic creation
- transfer of responsibility to artists
- protection against the consequences of subjective decision making: no one is provided a monopoly on decision-making

20. SOUTH AFRICA

ANTON LOUBSER, IAA/AIAP EC MEMBER, MAIN COORDINATOR FOR AFRICA

Briefly, from official South African quarters, there is no definition as to who may be seen as a ‘professional artist’. Consequently, with regard to the availability of particular social privileges, benefits or concessions, no distinction is made between the status of a person who may be regarded as a ‘professional artist’ by UNESCO, the IAA or whoever, and any other mortal tax payer on a SA street. Sophisticated distinctions which mark social benefits that are afforded to various professions e.g. in various European countries, have not known such development here. Africa still has quite a way to go.

With regard to South Africa, probably as in most African countries, traditional national values, crafts, etc. continue to play an important role in considering who is regarded as a ‘professional artist’. We should take care not to encourage, inadvertently, criticism that is sometimes expressed in non-Europe circles that European countries (and the USA) tend to dictate to the rest of the world. It is submitted that the rather flexible but very well construed definition by UNESCO, in 1980, in Belgrade, as part of the 'Recommendation concerning the Status of the Artist' is the closest we can get to cover the concept 'artist' in general in most countries of the world. For ease of reference, it reads: 'Artist is taken to mean any person who creates or gives creative expression to, or recreates works of art, who considers his artistic creation to be an essential part of his life, who contributes in this way to the development of art and culture, and who asks to be recognized as an artist whether or not he is bound by any relations of employment or association'. In an effort to avoid uncertainty about how to understand what is meant by 'an artist', it is suggested that this definition, which carries the blessing of UNESCO, be included in the Status of the IAA when the Status are to be revisited at the next General Assembly.

But then, shortly before the EC meeting in Antofagasta, Martine was good enough to furnish me with an undated document which she had apparently found in an IAA head office file, carrying the approval of both the IAA and UNESCO. This document, titled 'Notes of Guidance', makes a distinction between a 'professional artist' and an 'artist per se'. Having read it, and re-read it 'through African spectacles', I can understand that many African artists may find the document, as it distinguishes between what it regards as 'professional artists' on the one hand, and on the other hand 'artists' who by implication may not all be professionals, rather discriminatory and perhaps reminding of a 'European dictate'. The IAA Status refer only once to 'professional artists' (in 'Rules for Meetings', par 3.3) as follows:

'The title and prerogatives of 'delegate' may only be used by professional artists practicing one of the disciplines listed in Article 1 of the Status ...'

This leads to a rather confusing situation, as the disciplines mentioned in art 1 of the Status refer to 'comprising artists belonging essentially to the fields of painting, sculpture, printmakers and artists practising other forms of creative work in the visual arts ...'. It sounds vague, if not restrictive, unless par 8.07 of the Notes of Guidance which were discovered by Martine are taken into consideration by adding to par. 3.3 of the Rules for Meetings of the Status 'or are known as such at least throughout his own country.' After all, a reference to 'other forms of creative work' does not necessarily imply the production of physical objects. Can we deny the intellectual creativity of a properly qualified Arts Curator, a Professor of Fine Art who is too occupied in moulding and creating students to become fine artists thereby not finding the time to produce works of art himself, art critics, etc? Surely they are entitled to be regarded as professional artists'.

We did not have the time in Antofagasta to thrash out the subtleties when referring to 'artists' and 'professional artists'. This seems to be an aspect that should be taken into account when considering possible amendments to the Constitution at the forthcoming EC meeting.

Pavol Král: the opinion of our colleague and friend, Anton Loubser, reflects the ambiguity in the usage of the terms "artist" and "professional artist" (I agree: ambiguity is the problem) and also expresses some concern of the situation in Africa. I explained the difference between artists and professional artists as well as I expressed the definition of UNESCO in the analysis and proposal of the definition of a professional artist (see appendix 9 Analysis of the definition of an artist) and I responded on it in the beginning (see III/ Preliminary evaluation of findings), as well as on concerns from the perspective of Africa.

In the interests of openness and undistorted results of the discussion, I have attached statement of A. Loubser in full, although in some parts it is probably just a misunderstanding, for example:

- the status of the artist is not meant to deny, quote, "other forms of creative work, that do not necessarily mean the production of physical objects". Let me remind you that proposal presupposes a status for all kinds of art (this is the aim in Slovakia and corresponds to the practice in other states), including kinds of art of no physical object as a final product of artist work - as in artistic performance of actor or musician. So in that sense, there is nothing to be afraid of.
- this discussion should not change the status of IAA: it focuses on legislative solution of the status of artists in different countries.

APPENDIX 1 – GENERAL DISCUSSION ON THE NEEDS FOR AND RESULTS OF THIS RESEARCH

A/ WHY WE SHOULD EVEN DEAL WITH THIS ISSUE

The artist is often considered - despite major difference - as an entrepreneur, although the primary goal of business is profit. Cultural and artistic activities may have a different character.

A few quotes from the UNESCO Convention from 2005 (ratified by most countries, including Slovakia):

The objectives of this Convention are:

- to give recognition to the distinctive nature of cultural activities, goods and services as vehicles of identity, values and meaning. (I./ article 1/g)

Cultural activities, goods and services refers to those activities, goods and services, which at the time they are considered as a specific attribute, use or purpose, embody or convey cultural expressions, irrespective of the commercial value they may have. Cultural activities may be an end in themselves, or they may contribute to the production of cultural goods and services. (III./ article 4 / 4)

We are not saying that artists are better. But in line with the UNESCO Convention we note that they are different.

And if they are different this should be reflected in the relevant legislation.

Based upon our everyday experiences, we know that if we are not able to define very clearly the “professional artist”, it is very difficult or impossible to negotiate specific rules for artists or specific solution in taxes, social insurance and in other form of support.

That is why we see it as a point of departure, and we address it as a priority, in order to work on improving the social and legal right of artists and implement it in practical terms - in line with the UNESCO Convention.

B/ FIVE OFTEN REPEATED ANSWERS TO QUESTION „WHO IS AN ARTIST? “

- Everybody has natural right to create, so everybody is potential artist
- Definition of artist based on Recommendation of UNESCO
- Professional artist is only a person who graduated from special art academy
- Professional artist is only a person who has earned money from artistic activities
- Recognition of professional artist through combination of two criteria: specific art education or verifiable results of their art activities

C/ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES OF THE VARIOUS ALTERNATIVES

1. EVERYBODY HAS NATURAL RIGHT TO CREATE, SO EVERYBODY IS POTENTIAL ARTIST

This answer is very simple but useless in real life:

In practice, such a definition does not clearly distinguish artists from other workers (from the point of view of tax, social security or other government institution officer worker), so the problem is to define whom the possible regularization would cover.

2. DEFINITION OF ARTIST BASED ON RECOMMENDATION OF UNESCO

“Artist“ is taken to mean any person who creates or gives creative expression to, or re-creates works of art, who considers his artistic creation to be an essential part of his life, who contributes in this way to the development of art and culture and who is or asks to be recognized as an artist, whether or not he is bound by any relations of employment or association.

Advantage: recognition based on philosophical and very general definition is correct as a starting point.

Disadvantages: in practice, such a definition does not clearly distinguish artist from other workers (from the point of view of tax, social security or other government institution officer worker).

We are not able to continue on negotiations with responsible representatives of state without having a rules that are applicable in practice.

Contrary to definition of UNESCO our target groups are:

- Artists who are dedicated to the art of long term and professionally (we do not need special legislation to address the status of those who for their own pleasure sing in the shower...)
- Artists whose art work is involved for their income, have an impact on their taxes and social security

Therefore, it is preferable to use unlike the UNESCO definition the term "professional artist"

3. PROFESSIONAL ARTIST IS ONLY A PERSON WHO GRADUATED FROM SPECIAL ART ACADEMY

Advantages: simplicity. Inclusion in the category on the basis of education is easily provable, dividing line is clear, such a definition does not require any complicated systems for application in practice.

Disadvantages: too radical. There have always been exceptions in art - artists without education but with great results; to ignore this is therefore unfair.

4. PROFESSIONAL ARTIST IS ONLY A PERSON WHO HAS INCOME FROM ARTISTIC ACTIVITIES

Advantage: simplicity. Inclusion in the category on the basis of income is easily provable, dividing line is clear; such a definition does not require any complicated systems for application in practice.

Disadvantages: recognition of artists just on income basis could be counterproductive.

- this could disqualify a considerable part of artists (also reputable, generally accepted artists) who are forced to earn their living in areas outside the realm of the arts
- it also disqualifies young artists who are just getting started and still do not have a provable income (and who need protection from the system the most)
- recognition just on income basis doesn't take into account the artistic quality of results - it would give room for abuse from people that are not artists („heroes“ of reality shows for example: Are they artists? Are they actors? We don't think so: their performances are often tasteless but often earn a higher income than real actors)

5. RECOGNITION OF PROFESSIONAL ARTIST BASED ON COMBINATION OF TWO CRITERIA: SPECIFIC ART EDUCATION OR VERIFIABLE RESULTS OF THEIR ART ACTIVITIES

Advantages: the only solution, which would provide a guarantee of training (though not a guarantee for a specific outcome), which would allow to define the number of artists involved in the particular issue in question, and which would permit a more rational and more targeted solutions from the part of the state. This solution provides a chance to reduce the risk of wasting public funds in support of poor quality art, and allows the use of public funds (which will always be limited) to support those who have demonstrated professional readiness for their artistic activity.

Possible additional benefits to society (not absolutely necessary):

- non-specialist consumers of art could verify professional expertise in a "register of artists"
- the registry could provide the information on the Web (for theorists, performers, journalists, organizers of cultural events or the wider public)

Disadvantages: the need to establish criteria and then judge who meets them.

SUMMARY – ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES OF THESE 5 ALTERNATIVES

Recognition of professional artist based on combination of two criterias:

- specific art education
- or
- verifiable results of their art activities is the best solution.

D/ HOW IT COULD WORK IN REALITY

Artist would be added to the register of Professional artists after meeting one of two conditions:

- Having graduated from specific art academy (minimum - bachelor of art?); the artist would be added automatically after his/her application.

Or

- If without appropriate art education, the artist would be added after being approved as a member of a nationally recognized art association in his area of specialization (visual art, music, literature, etc); this association would be the guarantor for state about who is professionally prepared artist.

E/ WHICH ART ASSOCIATIONS WOULD HAVE THE AUTHORITY TO DECIDE ON THE INCLUSION OF THE ARTIST IN THE REGISTER OF PROFESSIONAL ARTISTS

Representative associations for the area of arts:

- numerous enough in proportion to the number of artists in the country (for example: in country with about 1 000 - 2 000 of artists a minimum of 100 members);
- with article in their status that only professional (visual, musical, etc) artists can be members of this art association.

To maintain fairness and objectivity, it would be proper to give more than 1 art association for every area of art the authority to decide on the inclusion of the artist in the registry.

F/ APPLICATION PROCESS FOR ASSOCIATION MEMBERSHIP

Criteria for application should be clear and available to public.

Proposal of conditions to be taken into account by art associations in the process of judging applications:

- verifiable period of art activities of applicant (similar to the usual art educational period in the state – 5 - 6 years?);
- publication of his/her artistic results (exhibitions, concerts, ...);
- quality of his/her art activities/results (association should take into account decisions of other committees or institutions about the applicant's artistic work, for example awards, approved his/her artworks by jury of important national and international exhibitions, teaching activities in art subjects at art academies, in the case of musicians or actors work as a member of a recognized artistic institution, etc).

G/ PRINCIPLES OF RECOGNITION OF THE ARTIST IN EUROPE

(INFORMATION FROM WHITE BOOK, LA MAISON DES ARTISTES)

Most European countries apply the combination of professional education and evaluation by colleagues (Austria, Cyprus, Denmark, Spain, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania), less often solely evaluation by colleagues (Estonia, Finland, Portugal, United Kingdom, Sweden). In only three cases a combination of administrative decision and evaluation by colleagues (Germany, France and, Luxembourg) and in two only administrative decision (Belgium and Netherlands).

H/ EXAMPLE OF RECOGNITION OF THE ARTIST IN THE NON-EUROPEAN STATE

The Canadian status of the artist takes into account evaluation by colleagues (...whether he is recognized by other artists as being an artist - 18/b/ii).

In conclusion to this proposal - recognition of professional artist based on combination of two criteria: specific art education or verifiable results of their art activities.

This proposal would not prohibit anyone to create art: those artists, for whom it is only an occasional hobby, could continue in their art activities under the same conditions as of now. So their situation would not get worse. Defining professional artist is rather a protection against poor quality performances like reality shows.

On the other hand, to those who are dedicated to art as to make it their profession and not just a hobby, the implementation of the proposal has a chance to improve their legal and social status. It would bring them closer to the conditions of artists in those countries that have already resolved some of these issues.

APPENDIX 3 – ACCOMPANYING TEXT

ACCOMPANYING TEXT TO THE QUESTIONNAIRE

Dear colleagues,

Improvement of social and legal rights of artists is one of the main goals of IAA. That is the reason why we would like to ask you to answer our brief questionnaire. Before answering the questions please pay attention to the document The definition of „Professional Artist“ (attached).

We would like to investigate what is the situation in different countries: Who is professional artist in different country? Are there some specific rules how artists are recognized in practice, in real life? Is it useful for artists or not?

We would like to collect positive examples and prepare an analysis of it for all of you. International working group has 3 members actually: Pavol Kral from Slovakia, Werner Schaub from Germany, Marta Pabel Pérez from Puerto Rico. Proposal that is attached - The definition of „Professional Artist“ – is result of about 5 years of negotiations at Slovakia and is prepared for negotiation with representative of Ministry of Culture and Council of Government for Culture of Slovak Republic. But discussion about it has started also at network of 5 international art associations: International Association of Arts (IAA), International Association of Arts - Europe (IAA Europe), European Council of Artists (ECA), European Coalition for Cultural Diversity (ECCD) and International Federation of Coalition for Cultural Diversity (IFCCD). There might be useful (or better?) solutions. It might be possible to prepare the framework not only for one country but generally for many countries all over the world. It is not discussion about theory - we would like to prepare the proposal really useful for artists. Implementation of something like that -in real life- is always difficult but:

- it would be easier after collecting experiences of artists from more than one country,
- it would be easier with support of artists from more countries or more art associations,
- it would be easier after accepting the proposal and implementing it to the real life.

We believe that it is worth of it.

Looking forward to getting a lot of answers from all of you 😊

Pavol Kral,
President of IAA Europe

APPENDIX 4 – SLOVAKIA DRAFT STATUS OF A REGISTERED ARTIST

DRAFT OF THE STATUS OF AN ARTIST – SLOVAKIA (LATEST VERSION - APRIL 2013)

---

Proposal of Legal Document – Status of a Registered Artist

I Preamble

The Slovak Republic, in accordance with the principles of fundamental human rights, values and supports freedom of expression as one of the basic preconditions for artistic freedom and creative expression.

In today's market economy, it is necessary—besides the protection of the rights of employers and employees—to ensure a legal definition of the socio-economic status of those creators of artistic values who create their work as freelancers, while taking into account the specific character of their work.

In order to reach this objective, and in accordance with the UNESCO Recommendations on the Status of an artist from 1980, we hereby submit this proposal of the legal provision, of its purpose and goals.

Definitions (of terms)

An artist is a physical entity/person who, as an author or as a performer, creates artistic work in the visual arts, literature, music, dance, audiovisual production and drama.

An artistic creation is a creation fixed in shape, space or fixed in any other way, which is created as a result of the unique abilities and expressions of authors and/or performers.

Artistic activity is the type of activity in which artistic expression of a material or non-material character is created.

An author is a physical entity/person who creates works of art in accordance with the Copyright Law (618/2003).

A performing artist is a physical entity/person who performs works of art in accordance with the Copyright Law (618/2003).

A registered artist is a physical entity/person in accordance with Article II – 1,2 of this law, who also meets the conditions given by Article III – 1,2 of this provision.

Status of a Registered Artist

The Status of a Registered Artist /hereinafter as „The Status“ only/ concerns physical entities/persons who develop their activities on the territory of the Slovak Republic and meet the following requirements:

They are educationwise qualified to perform artistic and/or creative activities or; they reach demonstrable artistic and creative results;

Their creative activities add to their taxable income and social and health care insurance.

For the purpose of this provision, „artist“ is a physical entity who meets the conditions set as follows in sections „a“, „b“ or „c“ of this article:

Generates income based upon contracts specifying the production and usage of the artistic property or artistic act while following the spirit of AZ 618/2003 and, must also be able to demonstrate meeting the criteria shown in item 1.a. above.

Or

Generates income for creative work based upon contracts specifying the production and usage of the artistic property or artistic act while following the spirit of AZ 618/2003 and, must be able to show a membership in a professional organization of artists in his/her field of interest/specialty.

Or

Generates income for creative based upon contracts specifying the production and usage of the artistic property or artistic act while following the spirit of AZ 618/2003 and, is considered a renowned authority by his peers in his/her field of creative arts.

Artist registration in accordance with the status is performed by..... (to be specified later).

Registration is voluntary and its duration is not limited, but the artist is excluded from the register if unauthorized registration is proved or upon his/her own request.

The impact of a legal norm

I. Collective bargaining

Trade unions of freelance artists (within the status) have the right to collective bargaining.

If all the trade unions of freelance artists show the interest, subjects that offer work to freelance artists, are required to bargain collectively with them.

The content and scope of collective agreements that these organizations will conclude, is determined by a special provision of the Ministry of Labour, Social Affairs and Family of the Slovak Republic (in cooperation with the Ministry of Culture).

If one of the parties should not agree with the content of the collective agreement, the procedure will follow applicable provisions of the Act on Collective Bargaining 2/1991 as amended.

II. Social security and payroll and taxation

The artists (creating according to the Status) have the right to such measures in social security, the payroll and tax system that adequately take into account specific features of their profession.

The representatives of artists (creating according to the Status) have the right to be invited

- to negotiations on the draft laws that affect their payroll and system of taxation,
- to negotiations on the draft laws that affect their social security system.

The representatives of the artists are entitled to approach the relevant ministries with proposals that take into account the specific position of artists on the labor market in the light of the UNESCO recommendations.

III. Participation of artists in finding solutions of cultural and artistic development as well as in improving the conditions for creative work of artists in Slovakia

The representatives of freelance artists (creating according to the Status) have right to participate in preparation of essential documents and draft laws regarding:

- the strategy for the development of culture and arts in Slovakia
- the preparation of systemic changes and actions in various fields of art, in culture and artistic education
- the preparation of draft laws that affect the conditions of work and the employment of artists (eg. construction law, public tenders in connection with the use of art in public space, the assertion of the original, domestic work in the public broadcasting media, the structure of arts education, protection of the results of creative work and intellectual property, etc.).
- the preparation of schemes and concepts to support culture (eg. laws and legislation on the grant or subsidy systems, art funds, etc.).

Be they authors or performing artists, professional artists usually generate intellectual property and incomes that are not sufficient to keep them in creative work. Only a small number of artists earn enough money solely by their artistic/creative activities. Despite the booming development of the cultural sector / creative industries, their activities are often carried out in conditions that are less certain than in case of other professions. Atypical (project-based) and casual employment, irregular and unpredictable income, research and development stage without pay, accelerated physical depreciation and high levels of mobility are the most important factors that the current structure of laws, social security system and tax structure do not take into account. (Study of the EU, November 2006).

APPENDIX 5 – CANADA AND QUEBEC

A/ CHARLES VALLERAND, GENERAL SECRETARY, INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF COALITIONS FOR CULTURAL DIVERSITY WWW.FICDC.ORG

A reform is currently underway (in the Quebec province). Last December 2012, the five major associations of professional artists representing 25,000 creators met with the new minister of Culture and Communication, Maka Kotto, on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the Status of the Artist Act to propose improvements to the Act.

At the Federal level, the Status of the Artist Act of 1992 defines the professional artist in the following way:

“artist” means an independent contractor (Art. 5), who (Art. 6(2)(b)

- (i) are authors of artistic, dramatic, literary or musical works within the meaning of the Copyright Act, or directors responsible for the overall direction of audiovisual works,
- (ii) perform, sing, recite, direct or act, in any manner, in a musical, literary or dramatic work, or in a circus, variety, mime or puppet show, or
- (iii) contribute to the creation of any production in the performing arts, music, dance and variety entertainment, film, radio and television, video, sound-recording, dubbing or the recording of commercials, arts and crafts, or visual arts, and fall within a professional category prescribed by regulation.

(Art 18(b) in determining whether an independent contractor is a professional for the purposes of paragraph 6(2)(B), whether the independent contractor

- (i) is paid for the display or presentation of that independent contractor’s work before an audience, and is recognized to be an artist by other artists,
- (ii) is in the process of becoming an artist according to the practice of the artistic community, or
- (iii) is a member of an artists’ association.

B/ GAÉTAN PATENAUDE, SECRÉTARIAT À LA CONDITION SOCIOÉCONOMIQUE DES ARTISTES, DIRECTION DES POLITIQUES ET DES RELATIONS INTERMINISTÉRIELLES, MINISTÈRE DE LA CULTURE ET DES COMMUNICATIONS DU QUÉBEC

1 Avez-vous actuellement dans votre pays un système valable qui permette aussi simplement que possible, mais certainement de reconnaître du point de vue de l'impôt ou de l'aide sociale qui est un artiste professionnel?

Les critères pour définir un artiste professionnel aux fins de l’obtention d’une bourse par exemple, ne sont pas nécessairement les mêmes que lorsqu’il s’agit de définir les conditions d’accès à une mesure fiscale ou à la protection en matière de santé et de sécurité du travail.

En regard de l’application des politiques sociales et fiscales, ce sont généralement les définitions de travailleur salarié et de travailleur autonome qui doivent être prises en compte.

Il n'existe pas une définition universelle de l'artiste professionnel qui puisse permettre l'application de toutes les lois et règlements en vigueur. Toutefois, le Québec dispose de deux lois sur le statut de l'artiste comportant chacune une définition de l'artiste professionnel aux fins de leur application. On trouve en annexe une présentation sommaire des définitions de l'artiste professionnel selon ces deux lois. Ainsi, l'existence des deux lois sur le statut de l'artiste permet d'en faciliter l'interprétation lorsqu'il est nécessaire de déterminer si un artiste professionnel peut bénéficier de la protection ou des avantages qui sont offerts par ces lois.

L'adoption de ces deux lois par le gouvernement du Québec permet à plusieurs ministères et organismes de s'y référer pour l'application des lois sous leur responsabilité.

À titre d'exemple :

Le ministère du Revenu

Le ministère du Revenu fait référence à la loi S-32.1 dans son Bulletin d'interprétation portant sur le Statut fiscal d'un artiste œuvrant dans un des domaines de production artistique visés par la Loi sur le statut professionnel et les conditions d'engagement des artistes de la scène, du disque et du cinéma. On trouve sur le site Web du ministère de la Culture et des Communications la référence aux bulletins d'interprétation de Revenu Québec touchant cette question :

<http://www.mcc.gouv.qc.ca/index.php?id=3746#c22129>

La Commission de la santé et de la sécurité du travail (CSST)

La CSST a publié en 2006 un Bulletin d'information intitulé Les producteurs du domaine artistique et la Loi sur les accidents du travail et les maladies professionnelles \(LATMP\) lequel a été modifié en 2010 Ce bulletin répond notamment aux deux questions suivantes : Qui est protégé par la LATMP ? et quels sont les droits des personnes protégées ?

Ainsi, pour l'aider à déterminer si un artiste est un travailleur au sens de la LATMP la CSST s'est appuyée sur le régime de négociation établi par la Loi sur le statut professionnel et les conditions d'engagement des artistes des arts de la scène, du disque et du cinéma.

En voici un extrait :

Après examen d'ententes collectives conclues en vertu de cette loi, la CSST considère qu'en fonction des critères qu'elle utilise pour déterminer le statut d'une personne physique, les producteurs<sup>10</sup> ont, en règle générale, un statut d'employeur<sup>11</sup> au sens de la LATMP lorsqu'ils retiennent les services personnels des

10 Producteurs de spectacles (théâtre, théâtre lyrique, musique, danse, variétés), organisateurs d'événements en arts de la scène lorsqu'ils agissent à titre de producteurs, producteurs d'enregistrements sonores (y compris la maison de disque lorsqu'elle agit à ce titre), producteurs de films et d'audiovisuels, producteurs multimédias, studios de doublage, organisateurs d'événements dans le domaine du cinéma et de l'audiovisuel lorsqu'ils agissent à titre de producteur, stations et services de radio ou de télévision, réseaux de radio ou de télévision, agences et services de publicité, tout organisme ou entreprise lorsqu'il ou elle agit à titre de producteur d'une activité secondaire ou complémentaire à son activité principale.

artistes qui travaillent dans les secteurs de négociation couverts par les associations d'artistes<sup>12</sup> suivantes:

- l'Union des artistes (UDA);
- le Guilde des musiciens et musiciennes du Québec (GMMQ);
- l'Alliance québécoise des techniciens de l'image et du son (AQTIS);
- l'Alliance internationale des employés de scène, de théâtre, techniciens de l'image, artistes et métiers connexes des États-Unis, ses territoires et du Canada (AIEST locaux 514 et 667);
- le Conseil du Québec de la Guilde canadienne des réalisateurs (CQGCR);
- l'Association des réalisateurs et réalisatrices du Québec (ARRQ)<sup>13</sup>;
- le Canadian Actors Equity Association (CAEA);
- l'Alliance of Canadian Television and Radio Artists (ACTRA).

En conséquence, la CSST considère que les producteurs ont l'obligation de déclarer la rémunération de ces artistes lorsqu'un contrat d'engagement est conclu avec eux, sauf lorsque ces artistes fournissent leurs services personnels par l'intermédiaire d'une personne morale. Ces derniers peuvent alors souscrire une protection personnelle pour bénéficier de la LATMP. Il en est de même pour l'artiste qui est son propre producteur<sup>14</sup> et qui ne fournit pas ses services par l'intermédiaire d'une personne morale. Lorsque cet artiste embauche des travailleurs, il a toutefois l'obligation de s'inscrire à la CSST à titre d'employeur.

En ce qui a trait aux contrats conclus par les producteurs avec les artistes qui travaillent dans les secteurs de négociation couverts par les associations<sup>3</sup> suivantes :

- Association québécoise des auteurs dramatiques (AQAD);
- Association des professionnels des arts de la scène du Québec (APASQ);
- Société des auteurs de radio, télévision et cinéma (SARTEC);
- Société professionnelle des auteurs et compositeurs du Québec (SPACQ);
- Writers Guild of Canada (WGC).

La CSST reconnaissant habituellement un statut de travailleur autonome à ces artistes, la déclaration de leur rémunération n'est pas nécessaire si, entre autres, la durée du travail effectué pour un producteur est inférieure à 420 heures par année civile. Ces artistes peuvent cependant souscrire une protection personnelle pour bénéficier de la LATMP.

Pour les autres secteurs d'activité des réalisateurs, comme il n'y a pas d'entente collective, le statut des réalisateurs et réalisatrices doit être établi en fonction des critères publiés dans le guide de la déclaration des salaires. Il en est de même en ce qui concerne les membres du Conseil du Québec de la Guilde canadienne des réalisateurs.

Malgré ce qui précède, il est à noter que tout contrat d'engagement qui semble particulier peut être soumis à la CSST pour examen, à la fois par les artistes et par les producteurs.

En ce qui concerne les artistes représentés par le Conseil des métiers d'art du Québec (CMAQ), par le Regroupement des artistes en arts visuels du Québec (RAAV) et par l'Union des écrivaines et écrivains québécois (UNEQ), la CSST considère que ces artistes ont généralement un statut de travailleur autonome ou d'employeur, le cas échéant. Ils peuvent souscrire une protection personnelle pour être protégés en vertu de la LATMP ».

Par ailleurs, la CSST a publié en mai 2012, une note d'orientation intitulée Démarche de détermination d'un statut de personne physique aux fins de la cotisation. La section 6 traite du statut de l'artiste et les questions suivantes y sont abordées :

- Quelles sont les entreprises du domaine artistique ?
- Quels sont les artistes couverts comme « travailleur » ou comme « travailleur autonome considéré comme des travailleurs »
- Y a-t-il des exceptions ?
- Quels sont les artistes qui peuvent se couvrir comme travailleur autonome ?

Le Conseil des arts et des lettres du Québec

Aux fins de l'octroi d'une bourse, le Conseil des arts et des lettres du Québec définit l'artiste professionnel de la façon suivante :

- se déclare artiste professionnel;
- crée des œuvres ou pratique un art à son propre compte ou offre ses services, moyennant rémunération, à titre de créateur ou d'interprète, notamment dans les domaines sous la responsabilité du Conseil des arts et des lettres du Québec (CALQ);
- a une reconnaissance de ses pairs;
- diffuse ou interprète publiquement des œuvres dans des lieux et/ou un contexte reconnu par les pairs.

Source : <http://www.calq.gouv.qc.ca/faq/artistes.htm#1>

On constate ici que cette définition de l'artiste professionnel est semblable à la définition qui figure dans la Loi sur le statut professionnel des artistes des arts visuels, des métiers d'art et de la littérature et sur leurs contrats avec les diffuseurs \(L.R.Q., c. S-32.01\) (Voir annexe)

À la lumière des ces trois exemples, on constate qu'un artiste professionnel peut avoir, selon les différentes lois un statut différent et qu'un examen spécifique peut être nécessaire pour déterminer son admissibilité à une mesure de protection sociale ou fiscale.

C/ EXCERPTS FROM NEIL CRAIG ASSOCIATES REPORTS

Report for Province of Ontario – 2007

For a variety of reasons, including maintaining professional standards, eligibility for grants, prizes and access to support systems, both artists' organizations and arts agencies also need to distinguish between professional artists and others who might occasionally write an article, paint a picture, or perform in a play. All of the associations, unions and guilds that represent artists have objective membership criteria that distinguish between professionals and amateurs.

The first federal Advisory Committee on the Status of the Artist, appointed shortly after the Report of the Siren-Gélinas Task Force was tabled, considered this issue in its Canadian Artist Code, a precursor of the Status of the Artist Act. The Code effectively synthesized the community's definition of what constitutes being a professional artist. The Code has no legal status and has largely disappeared from view; however, this definition was highly regarded by the community as being an excellent way to distinguish between a professional artist and an amateur or hobbyist.

Under the Code, an artist is defined as a person who works as a creator, interpreter or performer in one of the "fields of artistic endeavours" found later in the Code. To qualify as professional, an artist must meet four of these tests, of which at least one must be (a), (b) or (c):

- the fact that an artist receives compensation from his/her work including sales, fees, commissions, salaries, royalties, residuals, grants, awards, any of which may be reasonably included as professional or business income;
- the fact that an artist has a record of income or loss relevant to the exploitation of his/her work and appropriate to the span of the artistic career;
- the fact that an artist has received public or peer recognition in the form of honours, awards, professional prizes or by publicly disseminated critical appraisal;
- the fact that an artist has presented his/her work to the public by means of exhibition, publications, performances, readings, screenings, or by any other means appropriate to the nature of the work;
- the fact that an artist is represented by a dealer, publisher, agent or similar appropriate representative;
- the fact that an artist devotes a reasonable proportion of his/her professional time as an artist to promoting or marketing his/her work, including attending auditions, seeking sponsorship, agents or engagements, or similar appropriate activities;
- the fact that an artist has received professional training either in an educational institution or from a practitioner or teacher recognized within the profession;
- the fact that an artist has membership in a professional association appropriate to his/her artistic activity whose membership or categories is limited under standards established by the association; or is a trade union or its equivalent.

TAXATION

The Recommendation states: “Convinced of the uncertainty of artists' incomes and their sudden fluctuations, and of the special features of artistic activity ... Member States are invited ... to take into account in their taxation system the particular conditions of artists' work and activity.”

Most countries need some way of determining whether or not a person is a “professional artist” for purposes of taxation. However, there is little consistency in how this is done and no comprehensive analysis of the impacts of different definitions. Typically, there are five ways to define “professional artist.”

An artist is defined as a professional if they are a member of a recognized artist association which has professional eligibility requirements.

A committee of experts or artists' peers may determine artistic status. The Netherland's WIK scheme and the Mexican tax payment through art systems use this approach.

The taxation authority may determine the status of each individual artist. The tax exemption scheme in Ireland uses this approach.

An approach taken in some jurisdictions is to define an artist as someone who produces art, thus the output is determinative. However, this merely shifts the issue from “who is an artist,” to “what is art.”

The artist is deemed professional if the work is undertaken as a business. Tax authorities in many countries, including Canada and Québec, the United States and Australia use this approach. Australia has an innovative approach which considers the “profit motive” to be pivotal, thus relying in part on the intention of the taxpayer.

Considering our earlier example of Vincent van Gogh, it is likely that if he were to have been assessed under any of these definitions during his lifetime, he would not have been found to be a professional, but rather a hobbyist. This highlights the challenge of definition.

The distinction between being a professional and a hobbyist is important because, in many countries, professionals may deduct business expenses from their income before calculating their taxes, while hobbyists either may not be able to deduct these expenses at all, or may be subject to limits. Also, in some countries, professionals who experience a loss on their business in one year may be able to use it to reduce the tax liability of other income they earned during that same year, or to carry it forward into a year in which they return to profitability.

<sup>15</sup> Status of the Artist in Canada: An Update on the 30th Anniversary of the UNESCO Recommendation Concerning the Status of the Artist, September 2010

The issue of expenses of artists can also be problematic for tax authorities because there can be a considerable time delay between when the artist incurs the expense and when the artist generates income from the work they create that relates to that expense. Particularly with the “just in time” production model, for most businesses, there is a close relationship between the input expense and the sale of the good or service.

Report for Canadian Conference of the Arts – 2010

5.0. Deductions of artistic expenses against artists' income

The degree to which a professional artist can deduct artistic expenses against income earned from their art and from other sources depends on a variety of factors, including whether they:

- have “a reasonable expectation of profit” from their artistic activity,
- are considered to be self-employed for purposes of their artistic activity, or
- are considered to have entered into a contract of service and thus to be in an employee/employer relationship for purposes of their artistic activity.

Many of the interrelated issues that arise from an analysis of the deductibility of expenses are addressed in two Interpretation Bulletins published by the Canada Revenue Agency:

IT-504R2 – Visual Artists and Writers

IT-525R – Performing Artists

5.1 Reasonable expectation of profit

Generally, professional artists are considered to be carrying on a business. Section 9 of the Income Tax Act provides that a taxpayer's income from a business is the profit made in the year. Should the business expenses exceed the income, the loss is deductible for income tax purposes. Thus, any loss can be deducted from other income that is earned by an artist in the same year, regardless of the source of that income.

However, if the artist does not have a “reasonable expectation of producing profits,” the artist is considered to be pursuing a hobby or personal interest rather than carrying on a business. Thus, any loss incurred is not deductible against other income, regardless of how many expenses have been incurred and the amount of revenue earned by the artist from their art in any year.

There are special rules for artists, including recognition that “a taxpayer (who is an artist) may not realize a profit during his or her lifetime but still have a reasonable expectation of profit.” Despite these rules, some artists, considered by the community to be professionals, have been deemed by the Canada Revenue Agency and its predecessors to be hobbyists. In the past few years, several artists who have received grants from the Canada Council for the Arts have failed this test, even though artistic grants are only available to professional artists and are awarded by the Council on a rigorous basis adjudicated by a panel of peers. Jury members must have strong credentials in the field in which the grant is awarded.

It should be observed as well that the Status of the Artist Act contains a definition of professional artists, as follows:

Section 5

“artist” means an independent contractor described in paragraph 6(2)(b):

Section 6(2)(b) independent contractors determined to be professionals according to the criteria set out in paragraph 18(b), and who

- (i) are authors of artistic, dramatic, literary or musical works within the meaning of the Copyright Act, or directors responsible for the overall direction of audiovisual works,
- (ii) perform, sing, recite, direct or act, in any manner, in a musical, literary or dramatic work, or in a circus, variety, mime or puppet show, or
- (iii) contribute to the creation of any production in the performing arts, music, dance and variety entertainment, film, radio and television, video, sound-recording, dubbing or the recording of commercials, arts and crafts, or visual arts, and fall within a professional category prescribed by regulation”

Section 18(b)

in determining whether an independent contractor is a professional for the purposes of paragraph 6(2)(b), whether the independent contractor

- (i) is paid for the display or presentation of that independent contractor’s work before an audience, and is recognized to be an artist by other artists,
- (ii) is in the process of becoming an artists according to the practice of the artistic community, or
- (iii) is a member of an artists’ association.”

This would seem to be an example where the world of the income tax system and its administration does not fully align with other government policies or with the artistic community, including certain agencies of government. For the tax authorities, the key factor is whether or not the artist is carrying on a business that has a “reasonable expectation of profit.” For the cultural community, the key factor is whether or not the artist is a “professional” as that term is understood in the community.

Considering the cultural heritage of the Kingdom of Morocco, which has always stood out for the richness and variety of its creativity and forms of expression;

On the basis of the exalted regal guidance contained in Letters addressed by His Late Majesty Hassan II, may God rest him in peace, to artistic meetings and conferences in our country, and the outstanding solicitude which His Majesty Mohammed VI, may God send him victorious, continues to show for the legal status of artists and for the structures whereby their creative work is produced and distributed;

Conscious of the fact that Moroccan artists, with their different schools and forms of expression, help to preserve national identity, strengthen ties and protect Moroccan culture among the nations;

Chapter I Preliminary Measures Article 1 Definitions

1. "Artist" means any natural person who practices artistic activity, either continually or intermittently, in return for remuneration and in the context of a contract of work or employment, or who performs an artistic work to sell or rent it to others, or produces it for the public administration, local authorities or public institutions.
2. "Artistic activity" is any activity involving artistic creation or artistic performance, where:
  - (a) "Artistic creativity" is any artistic work by a natural person, particularly in the field of audio visual art, photography, fine arts, music, theatre, literature (either written or spoken) or choreography.
  - (b) "Artistic performance" is any activity involving the artistic presentation or execution of all or part of an artistic work by a natural person, in any way, especially in the fields of music, theatre, variety shows, circus or puppetry.
3. "Impresario" is any natural or juridical person who concludes a contract of work or employment with an artist, for the purpose of undertaking artistic activity in return for remuneration.
4. "Individual contract" is any individual agreement concluded between an artist and an impresario. "Joint contract" means any agreement concluded between a group of artists and an impresario.
5. "Art services agency" refers to any juridical person who undertakes to bring the demand and supply for artistic services together, while not being a party in any artistic working relationship that may result therefrom.
6. Under this Act, a professional card is granted to everyone to whom the above definitions apply. The conditions and mechanisms for granting the card are defined in the regulations.

Article 2

For the purposes of this Act, "artistic revenue" is considered to be:

- (a) Any monetary sums and the like, either in cash or in kind, which an artist receives in return for carrying out artistic activity.
- (b) Any remuneration which an artist receives in return for ceding privileges or intellectual rights which have arisen as the result of artistic creativity or of an artistic performance.

Chapter II Relationship between Impresarios and Artists

Article 3

The contract between the impresario and the artist is concluded for a specified period of time, or for the performance of a specified artistic activity.

Article 4

The contract concluded between the impresario and the artist is considered as being a contract of work.

The contract may be a joint work contract concerning a group of artists for the presentation of a specific performance or for their jointly carrying out an artistic work. In this case the contract must include the name of each artist individually, specifying his or her remuneration. After it has been signed, the artist must be given a copy of the joint contract which, if necessary, must specify whether the performance or performances are free of charge.

A joint contract may be signed by just one artist of the group, on condition that he or she has written power of attorney signed by each artist whose name appears on the contract.

The joint contract must stipulate each artist's remuneration, next to his or her full name.

Article 5

In the case of a joint contract concerning a group of individuals, only the artists are considered to practice artistic activity within the context of the contract.

Whether the contract is an individual or joint contract, neither the method of remuneration nor the amount thereof, or the name given to the contract by the parties, alters its status as a work contract between an impresario and artists. This is so irrespective of whether the artist owns all or some of the equipment he uses, either individually or with others, as long as he participates personally in the performance.

Article 6

The artist working under contract, whatever name is given to that contract, is an employee to whom the provisions of employment law apply, unless covered by a special text in that or other laws, and taking account of the provisions issued for protecting literary and artistic works or artistic activities carried out by artists who belong to public professional organisations.

The relationship between an impresario and an artist is based not only upon the provisions of the law, but also upon respect for professional artistic ethics.

Article 7

The work contract concluded between the impresario and the artist must be written.

The work contract between the artist and the impresario must be amended whenever there is a change in the artist's professional status, the amount of remuneration or the period of the contract.

Article 8

Any arbitrary termination of the contract entitles the other party to compensation, which is estimated in accordance with the contract itself. If this issue is not covered by the contract then the provisions of employment law visàvis the arbitrary termination of contracts apply.

Chapter III Remuneration

Article 9

If the presentation or execution of the artistic activity requires more than fifteen (15) days, the artist and the impresario may establish payment dates by mutual agreement, on condition that the artist receives advance instalments every fifteen (15) days, in such a way that he or she has been fully remunerated at the termination of the contract or at the conclusion of the artistic activity.

Article 10

The amount of the remuneration must be included in the contract.

The distinction between the two forms of remuneration pursuant to paragraphs (a) and (b) of article 2 must be indicated in the contract.

Article 11

When remuneration is paid a receipt must be issued showing the applicable fees and deductions, and the shared obligations as defined in article 13 below.

Article 12

Artists benefit from the privilege defined in section 1248 of the Code of Obligations and Contracts promulgated by the Edict published on 9 Ramadan 1331 (12 August 1913), concerning the payment of any monies owed to them by the impresario from the impresario's moveable goods, in accordance with that section and the conditions defined therein.

The legal compensation arising from the arbitrary termination of the contract by the impresario is part of the same privilege and has the same standing.

Chapter IV Social Security

Article 13

Artists to whom the provisions of this Act apply benefit from legislation covering accidents in the workplace, social security and basic health cover.

The governmental authorities responsible for culture are working to establish mechanisms to finance social services for artists, in the context of current law.

Chapter V Juvenile Artists

Article 14

It is forbidden to employ any juvenile under the age of eighteen to act or appear in a public performance, without advance written permission from the labour inspector. This must be with the agreement of the juvenile's guardian and after having informed the governmental authorities responsible for culture. The labour inspector has the right, by means of a justified decision made either of his own accord or at the request of any qualified party, to withdraw the permission he had previously granted.

Article 15

It is forbidden for anyone not undertaking research or study in the context of media or academic activities, to publish in any way, any comment, news or information concerning a juvenile under the age of eighteen, save for information connected with that juvenile's artistic activity. It is likewise forbidden to make any exploitative form of announcement aimed at inducing juveniles to practice the artistic professions by highlighting the lucrative nature of those professions.

Article 16

It is forbidden to make juveniles under the age of sixteen play dangerous games, or to oblige them to participate in performances which threaten their life, health or morals.

Article 17

If the provisions of articles 15 and 16 are infringed, the labour inspector shall request the local administrative authorities concerned to intervene to stop the offending performance, and the Public Prosecutor's Office shall be so informed.

Chapter VI Art Services Agencies Section One Establishing an Art Services Agency

Article 18

An art services agency may be established after having received authorisation from the competent authorities, as stipulated in the regulations. Thereafter it may, in exchange for payment, undertake to seek employment for artists in theatres, musical ensembles, variety shows, cinema, radio, television, cinema or circuses, or other such work in the world of entertainment.

Article 19

Authorisation to practice as defined in article 18 may only be granted to art services agencies established in the form of commercial companies.

An authorisation may not be granted, or maintained, for an art services agencies run by an individual who has suffered a definitive conviction for a crime against morality.

Article 20

The request for authorisation to practise must include information about the art services agency, particularly the following: its address, the nationality of the director, the nature of the artistic activities it intends to pursue, models of the contracts it uses as per the regulations, its account number and the amount of its capital.

The art services agency may at any time be asked to provide supplementary information.

Section Two Art Services Agencies' Fees

Article 21

Staff of art services agencies, when undertaking their function of seeking employment for artists, may not receive or accept deposits or collateral of any kind.

The impresario alone bears responsibility for the fees requested by the art services agency, while the artists employed pay nothing.

Article 22

The amount of the fees art service agencies receive from impresarios may be no more than: 2 per cent of the artist's remuneration for periods of employment not exceeding fifteen days. 5 per cent of the artist's remuneration for periods of employment between fifteen days and one month. 10 per cent of the artist's remuneration for periods of employment of longer than one month.

For the purposes of this article, remuneration is calculated as per the remuneration defined under paragraph (a) of article 2.

Article 23

Art services agencies must keep records in order to allow monitoring of the extent to which employment provisions in the artistic world are respected. The form and requirements of this register are defined in the regulations.

Chapter VII Exceptional Measures

Article 24

Employees and officials of the public administration, local authorities or public institutions may practise artistic activity outside working hours, either on their own account or for third parties, on condition that such activity does not have repercussions on the productivity of their work, and that it is not of a preponderantly commercial nature.

Article 25

Payment associated with artistic activities carried out by the category of persons defined in article 24 for the State, local authorities, public institutions or agencies in which the State holds at least 50 per cent of the capital, are not considered as a double wage.

Article 26

If the performance of the artistic activity necessitates absence from the workplace, the employee or official may take unpaid leave. This must not exceed fifteen days in six months and is renewable once.

Article 27

A contract between the public administration and an artist may be concluded individually and directly, notwithstanding any laws to the contrary, merely on the basis of a sworn statement on the part of the artist including his or her name, family name, national ID card number if Moroccan, passport or residency card number if a foreigner, current account number in a post office, bank or the public treasury, and an undertaking to perform the contracted artistic activity as per the agreed conditions and times.

APPENDIX 9 – UNESCO DEFINITION (1980)

UNESCO's recommendation on the status of the artist proposes a formal definition for all artists: 'Artist' is taken to mean any person who creates or gives creative expression to, or re-creates works of art, who considers his [sic] artistic creation to be an essential part of his life, who contributes in this way to the development of art and culture and who is or asks to be recognized as an artist, whether or not he is bound by any relations of employment or association'.

APPENDIX 10 – ADDITIONAL INFORMATION FROM THE IFACCA AND NAVA WEB SITES

D'Art Topics in Arts Policy no.1, March 2002

IFACCA and the National Association for the Visual Arts (NAVA), Australia

Most countries need some way of determining whether or not a person is a 'professional' artist for tax and benefit purposes. There is, however, little consistency in approach to definition. Some countries even have different definitions within their own jurisdictions. Moreover, there appears to be no comprehensive analysis of the impacts of different definitions. This D'Art report details five common approaches to definition:

- Definition through membership: A person is defined as an artist through membership of a recognised artist association
- Definition by committee: a committee of experts or artists' peers determines artistic status. The Netherlands' WIK scheme and Canada's Status of the Artist Act use this approach.
- Definition by authority: The taxation authority determines artistic status. The tax exemption scheme in Ireland uses this approach.
- Definition by association with artistic output: An artist is someone who produces art. This approach is taken in many jurisdictions, but merely replaces the question of 'What is an artist?' with 'What is art?'
- Definition by nature of arts activity: The artist is deemed professional if the arts work is undertaken in a businesslike manner. Tax authorities in many countries, including Canada, the United States and Australia use this approach.

The definition of an artist in Europe is not uniform. Some common approaches to definition

The methods and criteria used to define artists for tax and benefit schemes vary widely between jurisdictions. Five common approaches are set out below with examples from a number of countries. Often a mixture of these approaches is adopted.

1. Definition through membership: a person is defined as an artist through membership of a recognised artist association (eg a society of professional artists).

One consideration for determining professionalism under Canada's Status of the Artist Act 1992 is whether an independent contractor is a 'member of an artists' association' (Department of Justice Canada, 2001; clause 18(b)iii).

Although administratively simple, this approach still begs the question of which associations are to be officially recognised. And, as Heikkinen and Karttunen (1995; 4) find, the complexity of definition is compounded by the need to adopt different membership criteria to ensure comparable definitions across the various art forms.

2. Definition by committee: artistic status is determined by a committee, such as a committee of 'experts' or of artistic peers.

In the Netherlands, an 'independent advisory body' determines the professional status of artists applying for eligibility under the Income Provision for Artists Act, or 'WIK' (Ministry of Education, Culture and Science, 1998). In Mexico, a committee of art 'experts' determines and ranks 'artists' under a scheme to allow artists to pay taxes with works of art instead of cash (The Washington Post, 1999). Under the Canadian Status of the Artist Act (1992), a tribunal determines who is and who is not a 'professional' artist for the purposes of actions under the tribunal's jurisdiction (Department of Justice Canada, 2001).

3. Definition by authority: the taxing authority determines eligibility.

Under Ireland's acclaimed artists' exemption scheme, artists submit a claim to the Revenue Commissioners' Office (Revenue Commissioners' Office, 2001). While the Office makes the final decision, it is able to consult externally in making its decision.

The obvious problem of the designation by committee or authority approaches outlined above is how to ensure objectivity, fairness, or lack of bias in decision-making. Fairness depends on how decision-making is structured and how deciding bodies are appointed and overseen. This issue is particularly relevant since 'The Establishment' is regularly in tension with 'the arts', particularly the 'arts of social change' (Whitaker, 1993).

4. Definition by association with artistic output: the definition of an artist derives from the definition of artistic output; ie, an artist is someone who produces art (artworks, copyrighted materials and so on).

This type of definition exists in France (Syndicat National des Sculpteurs et Plasticiens, 2001), in the UK (Inland Revenue, 2001) and in the Republic of Ireland (Coffey, 1998; section 2.4). In the case of Ireland, the Revenue Commissioners' Office determines whether an 'original and creative work' has, or is generally recognised as having either cultural or artistic 'merit'.

In this approach, many of the problems of defining an artist are merely substituted with problems of defining art (or art products). Comprehensive definitions therefore tend to be long and complex, as in the four-page appendix defining eligibility under Ireland's artists exemption scheme (Revenue Commissioners' Office, 2001). Schemes with these definitions also tend to be for the production of 'original' or copyrighted output, which favours 'creative' artists rather than 'interpretive' artists (see note in 'other issues' below).

5. Definition by the nature of arts activity: an artist is deemed professional if their arts work is undertaken in a 'businesslike' manner.

This type of definition is particularly evident for retail sales tax systems, such as Value Added Tax (VAT) and Goods and Services Tax (GST), and for tax averaging schemes. In these situations, determination must be made about the nature of arts work. Characteristics common to arts work pose a number of problems for making such a determination, as it is not always obvious from a financial perspective whether someone is undertaking arts work as a 'serious' artist or simply a 'hobbyist.'
